

CHAPTER IV

CLOSING

A. CONCLUSION

Based on analysis and discussion on Chapter III about The Potential and Tourist Attraction of Jantar Mantar, New Delhi, India. So it can be concluded that Jantar Mantar is a historical tourism destination and has its own uniqueness and privileges. The uniqueness lies in the architecture of the building and architectural astronomical instrument . and we can close look at these structures such as Samrat Yantra, Jayaprakash Yantra, Rama Yantra, Misra Yantra.

But there are shortcomings in the Jantar Mantar, namely the lack of cooperation with the Government in the process of management and development, lack of the tourist facilities, lack of awareness of people there about environmental hygiene. However, it's good to visit for all ages because the place is worth to watch if especially people or tourist interested in astronomical facts. And here tourist can learn and know more knowledge about astronomical facts.

Potential of tourism to significantly contribute to economic development is based on the uniqueness of the sector. These unique factors could include the diversification of the economy, it allows for export growth, attracts people to even the most remote locations with unique culture and natural attractions.

The observatory is at prime beauty throughout the year. Tourists are allowed to use the equipment to watch the heavenly bodies. Thus, choose clear days of summer or winter. Cloudy and rainy days can hinder the view. Moreover, visiting in the morning will help you explore the place in slow pace.

B. SUGGESTIONS

Based on analysis and discussion on Chapter III about The Potential and Tourist Attraction of Jantar Mantar, New Delhi, India. It can be suggested that :

1. More promotion, so that tourist attraction in India is better known to the world community.
2. Improve care for tourist facilities. That may can usefull for tourist to be able to enjoy existing facilities.
3. Add more attraction in the tourist place. That can help more attract tourist come to that place
4. Establish cooperation with the Government. In order for the future get assistance from the government in the form of funding or assistance for additional facilities.
5. Foreign tourists must be careful because it is often the object of fraud and other criminal cases in India. Refuse delicately requests from unknown people. If he still insists, threaten to report it to the police station and then leave in silence. Don't try to argue with them. For tourist women, avoid going alone to areas that are quiet and known to be prone to crime at night.
